Suspect Stuns Police, Bends Nail With Teeth

Strong Man Is Embarrassed At Arrest for Theft and Is in Love.

MINEOLA, L. I.—Walter D. Szymkow, 32, a slender, trimly built man whom Sergeant Van Dyke was questioning at Nassau county police headquarters about a stolen automobile, became restive under the examination and tore a nail out of the floor with his fingers. The nail, about four inches long, squeaked and protested as a robin extracts a worm from the lawn.

Just Embarrassed.

While Sergeant Van Dyke stared in amazement, Szymkow clamped one end of the nail between his teeth and with a swift motion of his fingers bent the nail at right angles.

"Excuse me," said Szymkow, "I am embarrassed. I never have been arrested before."

"It's all right," said Sergeant Van Dyke, "but nails are scarce, you know."

A detective came in at this point with papers found in Szymkow's home at 2 North Sixth street, New Hyde Park. Among them were a newspaper clipping showing that in 1939 he had been billed as the Strong Man of Poland at Bob Ripley's exhibit at the San Francisco World's Fair. There were other papers which showed service with the Polish forces in Italy, Great Britain and France during World War II. Szymkow was a pilot. On one occasion he brought back across the English channel a plane which had been badly shot up and crashed near the coast. He was the only survivor of its crew of 10.

Police Interested.

Despite the fact that police charged him with grand larceny in stealing an automobile in New Hyde Park, Szymkow was gratified by their interest in his feats of strength. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs only 148 pounds, but he was able to halve a brick neatly with a blow with the side of his hand. Then he brought his fist down on one of the halves and pulverized it. When a chain was fastened around his chest Szymkow took a deep breath and snapped it.

Nevertheless, District Judge Albert C. Moore held him for the grand jury on the charge of grand larceny. Szymkow, who is in love, said he hoped it wouldn't spoil his romance.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Bettie Sue Cousin, who died Feb. 5th, 1946, one year ago.

What is home without a mother,
All things this world may send,
But when I lost my mother,
I lost my dearest friend.

Those hands that worked so hard,
Are folded now in rest;
So sleep on dear mother,
God's will is always best.

God needed one more flower,
To complete His Circle of Love,
So He took you dear mother,
To bloom in His garden above.

Dying we could not say goodbye,
Will always bring regret;
But the hearts that loved you dearly,
Are the hearts that don't forget.

She has gone with her Saviour,
I will follow by and by,
Strange it seems, I often wonder
Why the best are first to die.

—Sadly missed by her daughter, Clara Leftwich.

Chess Wonder, 6 Years Old, Is Shark at Game

Pits His Skill Against Dozen Experts; Was Genius At 18 Months.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. — Andy Oberta looks like any other little boy of six except for his thick lensed spectacles. The fact that he has the mind of a child twice his age and can give adult experts pointers on chess is something his mother can attribute only to alphabet soup.

"We had no idea how smart he was," Mrs. Margaret Oberta whispered as Andy pitted his chess skill against a dozen Los Angeles chess experts at once.

"I started to scold him once for placing the letters out of his alphabet soup and putting them on the table. Then I saw he had spelled out 'Chicago, Illinois.' That was when he was 18 months old."

Learns Quickly.

After that, she said they could not keep him from learning.

"A week after that he astounded us by naming every president the nation has ever had. I don't know where he found out," she said. "A few days later he recited the alphabet backward."

Van Nuys elementary school refused to enroll him, she said, because he was "too smart."

Sherman Oaks took him for one day, then sent him home when he told the teacher he'd learned all about that "kid stuff" when he was three.

University of California at Los Angeles training school for advanced children accepted him, but before he could enter it was closed because the university needed the buildings for college students.

I.Q. of Sixth Grader.

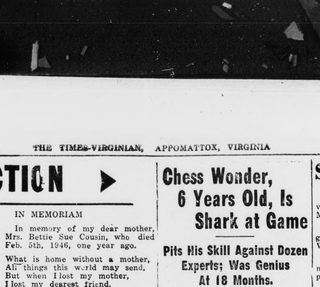
He has the intelligence quotient of "about a sixth grader," his mother said.

"He does fractions in his head, and lately has practiced measuring the distance from the floor to the ceiling of a room with his eye. He hasn't missed by more than three inches yet.

"He loves to make model planes and he saves all the pictures of planes that are printed on cereal packages. The other night he wrote a stern letter to a cereal company complaining that they were using too many pictures of one type of plane which he explained was inferior to some others."

He's as easy to handle as any other child, she said, except when

This Jet-Mobile Is Really a Suped-Up 'Hot' Car!



The tube of this jet-propelled car gets so hot that the driver, Bob Yeakel, has to wear asbestos clothing. The picture shows him swinging his legs away from the jet chamber to avoid the intense heat as the machine starts. During the run made at Rosamond, Calif., the jet tube glowed cherry red throughout its 15-foot length. The experimental car was built by Yeakel, Gale Kelly and Jack Munts. It burns propane liquid fuel, and would develop about 500 horse power at 100 miles per hour.

Everyone a Mail Man in Some Parts of the Australian Bush

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA.—In parts of the Australian bush letters are carried by strange "mailmen" often by tradesmen and even by passing strangers.

Almost every traveler in the outback has had the experience of being asked to deliver a letter.

Sometimes letters are left on a cleft stick or under a stone with a "marker" and the next man takes it along. In the bush a letter is a sacred trust born out of the comradeship of pioneer days.

In the artesian water belt of southwest Queensland people often talk of news traveling by "bore main cable."

The phrase has the same meaning as "bush telegraph"— a piece of news that has arrived swiftly and mysteriously but is often true.

In some districts the term has another meaning—which may point to the origin of the first.

A message in a jam tin will float rolled along a well-kept ditch carrying water from a bore until stopped by a piece of wire netting set there for that purpose.

On one occasion a police trooper stayed overnight with a man suspected of being a cattle thief. The policeman talked most of the night so that the suspect had no chance of slipping off to warn accomplices. But while he talked a hatter had been floating down the bore drain to tell of his arrival and evidence was destroyed.

Mrs. L. L. Gayle is spending this week in Richmond.

Miss Easley Shuford, of Madison College, Harrisonburg, will spend the week-end at her home here. She will have as her guest her roommate, Miss Doris Stickley, of Strasburg, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Almond, of Lynchburg spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Evans. Mr. and Mrs. Clay Thomas and children, of Newport News, were also guests.

William Moore, of Richmond was home for the week-end.

Buddies Help Veteran To Buy Station Wagon

ATLANTA. — Seven thousand-odd ex-G.I.s, attending a surplus automobile sale here, waived their priorities to permit a blind former comrade in arms to purchase a station wagon he needed to set up a business.

The blind veteran, Claude J. Bedenbough of Lake City, Fla., held a priority near the bottom of the list, and under War Assets administration rules of first to apply, first served, had little chance of getting the station wagon.

His former buddies acclaimed their waivers, and only a personal plea by Bedenbough prevented them from taking up a collection to purchase the automobile for him.

McCORMICK - COFFEY

Miss Helen Dorothy Coffey, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coffey, of Gladstone, Va. R. F. D. 1, and T-5 Hubert Scott McCormick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tea McCormick, of Bent Creek were married January 25, at the Baptist Parsonage at Amherst, by the Rev. A. L. Shumate.

The bride wore navy blue with black accessories and a corsage of red roses and gardenias.

Those attending the wedding included Cpl. Kenneth Coffey, brother of the bride.

Misses Peggy and Elsie Coffey, Robert McCormick, of Newport News, brother of the groom, and the groom's mother attended. The bride's parents gave a wedding dinner. The groom is a returned veteran, of 8 years service in the Army. They will make their home with the groom's parents.

Village Smithy Out; Chestnuts Are Back!

Modernization Is Result of an Intensive Research.

WASHINGTON — Research has helped modernize the village smithy, almost out of business, but it is bringing back his spreading chestnut tree.

At the agriculture department, G. F. Gravatt, who mourns the passing of the chestnut as much as we would the mighty man of Longfellow's poem, said the plant industry bureau has developed a hybrid which resists the devastating blight that by 1937 had overrun almost all the nation's chestnut forests.

The most successful blend so far, Gravatt added, is one that is three-quarters Chinese chestnut and one-quarter American.

New plantings of this hybrid are being pushed here and in the Mississippi valley as far south as Oklahoma. Commercial nurseries are not able to meet the demand for straight Chinese chestnut trees which are almost as good. The hybrid will not be available commercially for several years.

Gravatt said that experiments indicated that chestnut orchards eventually would flourish again east of the Mississippi river.

The dreaded blight came from Asia in Japanese chestnut trees, the department's pathologists believe. It was first discovered in 1904 around New York City and three years later the government got to work trying to find a way of stopping it.

By 1910, the blight had desolated chestnut forests in New Jersey and around New York City. It spread in the next 10 years over Massachusetts, eastern Pennsylvania and into eastern Ohio and West Virginia.

Ten years more took it to central Illinois, midway across Kentucky and Tennessee and into the Carolinas, Georgia and Mississippi. Since then, the blight has been found wherever there are chestnut trees east of the Mississippi river.

WORDS TO WATCH

* * *

Overheard on a newscast: "This might result in a massacree of peaceful Jews in Palestine."

There is no "cree" in massacre. The correct English pronunciation is: MASS-uh-ker.

Massacre is a French loan word. Hundreds of French words ending in -re have entered English; but in almost all cases the -re termination has been changed to -er, as center from centre, fiber from fibre, meter from metre, order from ordre, etc. Following this pattern, massacre should have been Anglicized as "massacer." However, since "c" before "e" usually is pronounced "s," the spelling "massacer" would have suggested the pronunciation, "MASS-uh-ser." The French spelling therefore has been retained.

* * *

Here are two good words to watch: gantlet and gauntlet.

Gantlet is from the Swedish gatlopp, "running down a lane." A gantlet originally was a form of punishment practiced by soldiers and American Indians. The offender, stripped to the waist, was forced to run between two lines of men who trounced him severely with ropes, switches, or clubs.

Gauntlet is from the French gantelet, "a glove so designed that it protected the hand (of knights) from wounds." Today a gauntlet is any glove that covers the wrists.

The NBC Handbook makes the mistake of listing "gauntlet" as meaning "glove" and "punishment" (running the glove?) Do not let this lead you into similar error.

The glove is: gauntlet.

The punishment is: gantlet.

Both, however, are pronounced the same: GAWNT-let.

* * *

Watch the word regime, "a system or rule of management or government." Not "ruh-JEEM." The word retains the French pronunciation, thus: ray-ZHEEM.

* * *

Q. To settle a dispute, please tell us how the bridge expert, Ely Culbertson, pronounces his first name. —D. M.

A. In a recent letter, Mr. Culbertson tells me that he pronounces Ely in the British manner, thus: EE-lee.

* * *

Bennettsville, S. C.: Please give the meaning of the name Suzanne. It means very much to me.—Mrs. E. G.

A. Suzanne is a variant form of Suzanna, which is from the Hebrew shoshannah, "a lily." Other spellings of the name are: Susanne, Susannah, Susan.

Circle Number Three of the Memorial Methodist Church met on Monday evening with Mrs. Herbert Cobb, in the home of Mrs. A. R. Harwood, Sr., with Mesdames F. F. Carr and J. N. Jennings as joint hostesses.

The meeting opened with an impressive devotional conducted by Mrs. Cobb. Mrs. Floyd Lucas presented an interesting account of the work done by the Methodist Church in Poland.

Mrs. C. J. Hunter, Circle Chairman, presided over the business session.

During the social hour several Valentine games were enjoyed by the group. The hostess served block ice cream with heart centers, individual cakes decorated in keeping with the Valentine theme, and salted nuts.
